Marking the United Nations Day of Holocaust Remembrance, this unique concert brings together three musical pieces never performed together and a United States debut of one piece all tied together by the events of the Holocaust. The concept for the event was inspired by the relationship between Jewish and non-Jewish musicians inside and outside of Germany before, during, and after World War II. CCM professor and conductor Mark Gibson inspired one of his students, Martin Wettges, a non-Jewish German 50 years removed from the Holocaust, to discover works of Jewish and non-Jewish composers. Together, Mark and Martin will conduct these once-silenced pieces, performed by members of the CCM Philharmonia and vocalists from the University of Cincinnati's College Conservatory of Music.

The program includes works by Herman Levi, Walter Braunfels, and Thomas Pasatieri.

This concert aims to bring lovers of music and history together for a night of music, education and remembrance.
