Teach & Learn

I am a survivor of a concentration camp. My eyes saw what no person should witness: gas chambers built by learned engineers. Children poisoned by educated physicians. Infants killed by trained nurses. Women and babies shot by high school and college graduates. So, I am suspicious of education.

My request is:

Help your children become human. Your efforts must never produce learned monsters, skilled psychopaths or educated Eichmanns. Reading, writing, and arithmetic are important only if they serve to make our children more human.

Sincerely,

Dr. Haim Ginott, Holocaust survivor, child psychologist and author

EYEWITNESSES

Mapping our Tears: Liberation and Justice.

In 2004, The Center for Holocaust and Humanity Education opened "Liberation and Justice," a new chapter in the innovative, educational exhibit, Mapping Our Tears. The testimonies reveal the eyewitness accounts of the liberation of concentration camps from the perspectives of American military veterans, Holocaust survivors and the unique experiences of the last living interrogator from the Nuremberg trials.

WWII Army Captains Milton Schloss and Elmer Reis, both Cincinnati natives, share their common experience of the liberation of Ohrdruf, the first slave labor camp liberated by the American forces in Germany. The descriptions and reflections of the two men are woven together as they jointly explain how these experiences changed their lives.

As one of only 75 prisoners found alive in Ohrdruf, Mr. Henry Meyer recalls his experience of liberation. He tells an amazing story of survival, of the countless times his life was saved by chance, and the recognition of his extraordinary musical talent. Mr. Meyer was a former professor of music at the University of Cincinnati's College-Conservatory of Music (CCM), an inductee into the Classical Music Hall of Fame, a virtuoso violinist of LaSalle Quartet and a member of the Auschwitz Orchestra.

John Dolibois, the last living interrogator from the Nuremberg trials, recounts his extensive conversations and interactions with top-ranking Nazi officials. Dolibois' illustrious career includes vice presidency of Miami University and United States Ambassador to Luxembourg.
